Election of Grand Officers.

The Grand Lodge re-assembled at 9

The Grand Lodge re-assembled at 9 o'clock this morning, pursuant to adjournment. The call of jurisdictions showed a full quorum to be present, and after the R. W. Grand Chaplain addressed the Throne of Grace, the Deputy Grand Sire, by direction of the Grand Sire, declared the Grand Lodge open for business.

Representative Tyson of Georgia, on behalf of the order in this jurisdiction, in a very neat and appropriate manner in-behalt of the order in this jurisdiction, in a very neat and appropriate manner in vited the Grand Lodge and visiting brethren to join in the excursion to Oglethorpe Park this afternoon, and also invited the Grand officers, representatives and Past Grand Representatives to participate in the grand banquet to be given in honor of our distinguished guests at the Kimball House to morrow evening, extending to all the warm, heartfelt greeting of Georgia Odd Fellows. The invitations were unanimously accepted, with the thanks of the grand body.

The report submitted by Mayor Van-sant, of Baltimore, Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge, shows the available as-sets of the Grand Lodge on August 31, 1874, to be as follows:

The report of Gen. James L. Ridgely, he honored and popular Grand Secreta-y, as historiographer, is a document of xceeding interest. We recommend all that jurisdiction.

The order at large will indorse this. Referred to the appro-priate committee.

Representative Leech, of Iowa, offered a resolution to the effect that members be disqualified from receiving the semi-an nual pass-word of the jurisdiction in which they hold membership when non-eneficial. Referred.

The hour having arrived for the election of grand officers for the ensuing term, Deputy Grand Sire Durham, the presid-ing officer, called Past Grand Sire Ellison, of Massachusetts, to the chair; whereupon Representative Porter, of Califor-nia, nominated Deputy Grand Sire Dur-ham, of Kentucky, for the position of Grand Sire.

The vote of the Grand Lodge was unanimous in his favor, and amid rap-of the entire grand body.

We were suddenly introduced into the great hall on the last or fifth story of the General Post office Department at St. Martins-le-Grand, where the chief work ander the system which has produced these results is performed. It was a magic scene. This was the "provincia gallery," a spacious and lofty apartment, well lighted and ventilated. At first it looked like a vast concourse of sewing machines, all at work at the same more approach to the provincia trayer. His own personal friends and relatives, while denying that he played such a part, agree in the opinion that he marks a most deployable mistake. Editors Constitution: At your request I cheerfully state that I am the author of the cotton articles which have appeared in your paper for the last two years, and as to the facts and figures given each week, I have to say that I have never yet published any statement of which I did not have the fullest proofs in my possession to bear out every word I wrote. You have often told me to write as strong bull articles as I possibly could, and to albull articles as I possibly could, and to al-ways incline that way as strongly as pos-sible. Beyond this you have never sible. Beyond this you have never had anything whatever to do with the ar-ticles. All the month of August I wrote as strong bull articles as I had the proofs al alone am responsible for the facts and figures which I give the public from week to week. Respectfully yours, S. B. Wight.

The above note shows that the only connection we have had with the cotton articles is the repeated request to favor the farmers as much as possible, and to always "incline that way." To furnish these cotton data, figures and facts to cotton planters and dealers, we are at an annual expense of five or six hundred dolaway with any possible prejudice in the lars. However, we cheerfully incur extra expense for the benefit of our readers, and are amply repaid for so doing by popular appreciation and patronage.

An Admirable Speech.

We print this morning the speech of Gov. Smith at Marietta. It is an admirable setting forth of the objects and evil effects of the passage of the civil rights bill, and a masterly demonstration that the southern people are the best friends of the negro. He also shows that the most amicable relations exist in Georgia between the whites and blacks, and that our people were never freer from unlawful disturbances and violence than at present. He concluded by exposing the folly of resistance by force to radical neasures, and points out the only true nethod of defeating them, as THE CONstitution has striven earnestly to impress upon the southern people. WHO ARE THE NEGROES' REST POTENDS But, fellow-citizens, it is not my inter tion to indulge in denunciation folly, to characterize it by no harsher term, has been committed, and we are bound to recognize facts as they exist. and to make the most of them. Upon us—the white people of the south—will chiefly rest the burden of educating and elevating the negro race in our midst. is true that, except the negro himself, w were the greatest sufferers by his emand pation; and, in like manner, we are the greatest sufferers by reason of his investiture of civil and political privileges of power. But we, nevertheless, deem it our duty to act as the next friends to this unfortunate race. They had our kind-liest feelings and our protection when they were slaves, and we must perform the office of friends and protectors at them still.

But, my friends, it seems we are de tined to meet with the most dishearter ing difficulties in all attempts to ameliorate the condition of our colored people In the performance of this great work we are met at every point by hostile influences, which we find it dif ficult, if not impossible, to correct. I d not charge that it has been the purpose of the administration at Washington, to excite hostility in the minds of the groes against the white people of groes against the white people of the south. No, I cannot believe that ye south. No, I cannot believe that yet. But I do repeat, no more than is well known to you and and to me, that all ill-feeling which exists between the two races in the south, is the direct logical consequence of the teachings of the radical party. The prejudices engendered in the minds of the negroes against the southern whites generally render it next to impossible for us to obtain their confi dence. Almost entirely dependent, as they are, upon their white neighbors, no only for moral and intellectual culture but also for the means of supplying their physical wants, still, as a general thing, they are much more easily influenced by the most worthless carpet-bag adventurer, than by those upon whom they are dependent for their bread. If mischief-makers, north and south, would let us alone, the two races could work out their destricts together and the atone, the two races could work out their destinies together, and the colored people, after a while, might be brought to a knowledge of the fact, that, after all, the white men of the south are their truest friends. Never until they know, and have learned to act upon this great truth, will there be any great improvement of their mental or moral condition. I have stated, fellow-citizens, that the subject of the negroes' rights will probably subject of the negroes' rights will probably never cease to be a disturbing element in our national politics. The reasonableness of the opinion will hardly be questioned by reflecting persons. When the emancipated slave was invested with the same rights as his master, it did really seem that all agitations in his special behalf ought then to have ceased. But the exciting question involved in the present canvass, and which will, in effect, be massed upon at the fall elections, is con-

This preference is altogether reasonable and has its origin in natural distinction between the two races. But it has been pretended that the negro did not associate with the white man because the latter den'ed to him man because the latter dened to him equal rights before the law. In traveling on the railway the colored man never occupied the same coach as the white man. The negro did not stop at the same hotel, or sit beside the white man at the theater. His children did not attend the tre. His children did not attend the e misunderstood by the intelligent au white schools, or mix with the children of his white neighbors; and when he died, it was not his high privilege to "enjoy" the cemetery in which the white joy" the cemetery in which the white man was buried. It was determined that he "man and brother" should have the where he was not wanted, and into which, indeed, he had no desire to go. He should have the right to sit by the white man in the coach, even against his own will. He should enjoy the privilege of sending his children to the whit chool, notwithstanding he preferred an ntended to send them to the school of intended to send them to the sendol of his own race; and while preferring burial in his own cemetery, he should accept the luxury of feeling that he might "enjoy" burial in a white cemetery, if he should so desire, after his death. Now, it seemed manifest to the "philanthematic" the without the decement.

ple present gave unmistakable indication that they approved the sentiments uttered by Governor Smith.—REPORTER.] THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL A DELUSIO Fellow-citizens, the "civil rights bill, s it is called, is a mischievous delusior It, in reality, gives no right to the colored man which our laws deny him. The white and the colored citizen stand equ before the law. If there is any adv the colored man. That portion of the common school fund raised from taxation is gathered almost entirely from the white people. As a general thing, it is unfortunately the case, that the colored tax-payer owns no property out of which his taxes can be collected. The poll-tax is devoted to common school co s collected from white tax-payers. Nev plored children are entitled to the bentit of this fund equally with the whit children. But it may be asked, if the provision of this bill would give the colored people no new rights, necessary to place then pon an equality with the white people why object to its being passed into a law As I have already stated, my friends, th provisions of this bill are mischievous and if it shall become a law, it will wheth er so intended or not, work irreparable injury to both races. Bad men, both blacks and whites, will consider its pass-age as an invitation to force their com age as an invitation to force their com-pany where it will not be agreeable, for the purpose of raising issues, and creating disturbances. Mischief-makers and breeders of strife will be on the alert to detect violations of the law, with a view to making cases in the courts, and creat to making cases in the courts, and creating heart-burnings between the races. Every place and every privilege set apart or given by custom and tacit consent to either race, will be invaded or circusively claimed by bad men in search of their "equal rights." All our common schoolswill be broken up at once. Hatred be tween the races will be engendered and extended until no regard for legal right will be felt by individuals of either race. Reverence for law will cense; and vio-lence, bloodshed, and crime, of every description, will increase fearfully. Lan-guage is inadequate to describe the evil consequences which will ensue, almost immediately upon the passage of this bill. Let it not be thought that I am a sensationalist. I am thoroughly acquainted with the spirit and temper of both races; and judging from the knowledge I give it as now the spirit and temper of both races; and judging the spirit and temper of both races; and judging the spirit and the spirit and temper of both races; and judging the spirit and t from that knowledge I give it as my opi ion that neither race will or can submit to the effects of this bill if it is passed and carried into operation as law.

But there is another evil conseque which will follow upon the passage of this law, to which I should direct your atten ion. Pride of race may not always b tion. Pride of race may not always be reasonable; but it is, nevertheless, a natural feeling. It is, indeed, one of the nobler instincts of our ra'ure. The white father looks with horror upon the possible contingency that his child may enter into the marriage relation with an individual belonging to the colored race. So the better informed among the colored people would regard with feelings of deepest repugnance any such relation bedeepest repugnance any such relation t tween their children and the offspring the white man.

I take pleasure in saying to the colore people upon this occasion that I have watched with great interest the growing watered with great interest the growing feeling of opposition to miscegnation manifested by their race. Colored, though they are, they are what God made them, and they do not cover the blood of another race in their veins. That is right, my colored friends; abide firmly by the atural distinctions of your race.

OBJECT OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL. A very slight examination of the drift of the civil rights bill will be sufficient to satisfy us that its author frames its provisions with a view to the ultimate amalgamation of the two races in the south. The evident object of the bill is to bring about social equal-of the bill is to bring about social equality, even at the expense of force, if necessary. It contemplates the education of the children of both races together in the same schools. In a speech delivered in the senate by Mr. Boutwell upon this bill, he declared, in substance, that even if it were shown to be presented. if it were shown to be practicable to give the children of each race equal educational privileges in separate schools, such an arrangement would not be desirable. That it was by educating the children of the two races together, that all ideas of caste would be lost. That the children would form the habit of regarding each other as equals. It was this same senator who said, in substance, in a speech delivered by him in North Carolina, in the last presidential carvages that the resolution but I do believe that his views and policy, if they could be carried out, would certainly result in the consummation of that infamy. This man, let it be remembered, was the colleague of Charles Summer, and is a representative man among his people.

I was informed by the Hon. Hiram P.
Bell, that a colored member of congress. who gave his opinion of the effect which the "civil rights bill," if passed into a law, would have upon the negro race, said in substance, that he had no doubt that if the policy of educating together the chil dren of the two races were adopted and persevered in, it would soon lead to internarriage between them, and that, in the course of three or four generations the white race would absorb the colored, and that the negro would thus dis-appear from the southern states. This sults he described.

I have referred to these two cases show, on the one hand what a representa-tive man from New England thinks of the blood and treasure which had been expended in achieving freedom for the a law, and on the other hand to show what an intelligent colored man, from Mississippi, thinks upon the same sub-ject. The statements of these men serve, also, to illustrate the policy sought to be established by the advocates of the bill and the motives which impelled them to HOW TO DEFEAT THE BILL

I am glad to see you here, coming as you do from every state in the union. Every one that comes to Geor, is one mission of peace is welcome. There have been those who came into our midst (and I do not mean to touch politics), who came not for our good or that of the country at large. They occupied no better position with you than with us, but they were not calculated to do you as much harm. But you are not responsible for their conduct.

During the late fratricidal war I take it for granted that the people of the north and south were equally conscientions. We had different leaders, different prejudices and different feelings. The rupture was a painful one. I am glad that we settled it without leaving it as a legacy to our children to settle.

MAYOR SPENCER'L ADDRESS. MAYOR SPENCER'L ADDRESS.

Mayor Spencer said that the task was a trying one at best, but when introduced in such a style it becomes more intense. I do not see that more can be said or done than has already been said or done. To say that you are welcome is but a repetition of what has already been said to you, and demonstrated publicly by our citizens.

I am simply in my official position to SIGN. SEAL AND DELIVER

SWELL WITH PRIDE at your assembling in our midst. I heartlly endorse the views so ably and eloquently expressed by Gov. Brown.

We are proud of our state. It is with no air of egotism that we allude to our mountains and the ore that lies imbedded in them; in our vast mineral resources; in the bravery and chivalry of our gallant sons, and the

and chivalry of our gallant sons, and the loveliness and grace of our noble daughters. [Great applause.]

When you meet a Kentuckian and speak of Henry Clay, his heart swells with pride; a Massachusetts man loves to dwell upon the virtues of Daniel Webster and Edward Everett; a South Carolinian glories in the fame of her Calhoun and McDuffle; Georgians can justly feel proud then of her Troup, her Forsyth, her Lumpkin, her Berrien, her Bartow and her Ccbbs—all christian gentlemen and statesmen. I heartily endorse the sentiments of Gov. Brown and Mayor Spencer. Whether we come from the north or south, or cast or west, we should dwell in peace, and reach out to attain the grand destiny that this country is bound to attain. A Warning to Young Men.

But I must desist. There is something in there (Floral Hall) I know more entertaining. When the brethren propose to leave Baltimore, the first question asked is, "are there any pretty women there?" And the next, "is there anything good to eat."

As my brethren have seen the pretty women for which Georgia bears so distinguished a reputation abroad, I must give way to allow them a chance at what they are fond of, for I know they are big eaters.

After the banquet was over the crowd re-sembled in front of the hall, when Mayor Spencer introduced JOHN W. STOKES, DEPUTY GRAND SIRE BLECT.

Mr. Stokes said in substance: It affords me great pleasure to be among you. You have heard the Grand Sire, but who nevertheless neglected to say anything concerning his numerous progeny. I am one of the young men of the order who will take the place of the old men whe they give up. We have enjoyed the hospitality of the people of Georgia and the city of Atlanta. I may be pardoned for saying a word about our order. We are not It is almost unnecessary to state that by this time, under the exhilirating influences of his frequent potations, Mr. Fogg's name very beautifully expressed his condition. In plain English, Mr. Fogg was very tight. He, however, found the barber shop run by a negro named Henry Brown, and located under the Kimball. House, and entering therein he demanded a shave. The barbers were all attention. His cost was removed by a colored boy named Henry Steel, who in removing Fogg's coat, discovered his condition, and also removed Fogg's money in character, but it was calculated that men of all political opinions and religious senti-ments would be among us. We have a plat-form upon which all can stand, and on which all men can and ought to agree—to aid and assist a common humanity. Our order is by a colored boy named Henry Steel, who in removing Fogg's coat, discovered his condition, and also removed Fogg's money from the pocket lest he should lose it.

As soon as the shave was over and his coal put on, the wretched Fogg discovered the theft. The horrors of his situation can scarcely be described. Here he was four hundred miles from home, his bride awaiting him in Rutledge, his money gone, and nothing left him to get married on except a box of paper collars and a neck tie. The air was filled with his lamentations, but the gentlemanly barbers indignantly denied that they had or knew anything about the money.

THE RECOVERY OF THE MONEY. Finally Fogg made his way to the police quarters, and there told his sad story in dis-tracted accents. Capt. Jones, Lieut. Mur-phy and Detectives Bomar and Murphy tracted accents. Capt. Jones, Lieut. Murphy and Detectives Bomar and Murphy went to the shop where the signs of guilt Lecame so apparent that all hands and the premises were searched. The search resulted as follows: On Henry Brown, the proprietor, was found $42.95, which he claimed as being his own property. On John Steel was found $72, which was undoubtedly Fogg's money. On the two remaining boys was found nothing.

The four barbers were taken to the calaboose, locked up, and warrants were sworn out by Bomar, before Justice Butt against two of them.

Constable Little took the prisoners over to the magistrate's office, where the cases were settled, and Fogg's money returned.

We should, however, like very much to know how a case of larceny from the person can be settled, and thus allow one or possibly more negro theives to escape the chain gang and be turned loose to plunder somewhere, if this can be done.

Anyhow Fogg got back the greater part, if not all of his money, and with his friend went on to Rutledge last night to celebrate his wedding. He will not pass through Atlanta on his wedding tour. and good will to man."

Odd Fellowship has nothing to do with war. The first session after the war was held in Baltimore in September, 1:e85. Representatives came from all sections of the country, and they never met with a more hearty reception. There is no bitterness of feeling. I am glad that it is passing away.

Educate the people to our doctrines, teach their hearts to sympathize and feel for fellow men less fortunate than themselves, to extend the arms of the order around men sinking beneath adversity to hold them up, to assist the widow and the fatherless. Those who know our order best know what its benefits are. It is no idle formula when we ask "Are any sick or in distress?"

It makes no difference whether the lodge is rich or poor, when appeals are made, we go deep down into our pockets. But we have well-digested laws, and a large fund already in our treasury. Old books that are worn out can be rebound and made as good as new. Music, Magazines, Law Books, etc., all bound in the very best style of the art.

where its people come from every land and suo; from the Penobscot and from Tar river. It is a matter of surprise to many that we should spring from the wilderness and be come a grand state. When the Grand Sire tells me to go I will go before the world in advocacy of the order. Nearly a quarter of a century ago I went to California, and without egotism can claim that I am one of the fathers of the Pacific coast. In 1849 we were without shelter or food, and had no organizations for relief. A few Odd Feilows saw the necessity of doing something for humanity. Without an organized lodge, we spent $100,000, and sent many a boy home to his weeping mother to console her, who, but for that assistance, would have perished.

I came 3,000 miles to do good, to show the effect of our work, and the duty we owe to our fellow man. In the behalf of the brotherhood of the Pacific coast—California, Nevada and Oregon—I return our thanks to our Georgia friends for their hospitable reception. (Applause).

At the conclusion of Mr. Randall's remarks, the audience returned to the cars and thence to the city.

The regular proceedings will be found on our first page. men.

We also call the at'ention of county offi cers to the fact that we manufacture blank books for the use of Ordinaries and Clerks a specialty. These books are far superior to the books usually bought from stores, as we use the very best quality of paper and put the best binding on them, making them much more durable than northern-made books. We rule and bind these books after any pattern to order.

ST. CECILIA ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES.

THIS institution stands upon an eminence, north of the city of Nashville; overlooking the valley of the Cumberland river. For beauty of seenery and healthfulness it is unequalled by any institution in the South. Sickress is almost unknown. Chalybeate water, in constant supply, is within the enclosure, and the purest. White Sulphur just outside the grounds. The course of study is thorough and solid; the system of the school, in accordance with the best models in the country. Retired, yet within easy reach of the city. It is for young ladies, all the advantages, and none of the drawbacks of the city schools. The Academy refers with confidence for verification of its past efficiency to its many finished graduates, and its pupils scattered throughout the South. Address, MOTHER SUPEKIOR, St. CECILIA ACADEMY, Nashville, Tenn.
